written by a leading expert in the field this book analyses the complex relations between the european union eu as a regional organization and the united nations un as an international global governance institution over the years the european union has developed relationships with other international institutions mainly as a result of its increasingly active role as a global actor and the transfer of competences from the member states to the eu this book presents a comprehensive and critical assessment of the eu s engagement with other international institutions examining both the eu s representation and cooperation as well as the influence of these bodies on the development of eu law and policy european union eu funding for united nations un organisations has expanded significantly over the last two decades the eu s partnership with the united nations development programme undp is an important example of eu un cooperation and undp was the fourth largest un recipient of european commission funds in 2018 against the backdrop of un and eu reforms that aim to strengthen multilateralism and promote more integrated development cooperation approaches this paper outlines priority areas in eu undp cooperation and modes of cooperation the term added value provides an entry point for identifying the rationales for eu funding to undp in eu budgetary discussions added value is a concept used to inform decisions such as whether to take action at the eu or member state levels or which means of implementation to select these choices extend to the development cooperation arena where the term relates to the division of labour agenda and features in assessments of effectiveness the paper explores three perspectives to consider the added value of funding choices within the eu undp partnership relating to the division of labour between eu institutions and member states the characteristics of undp as an implementation channel and the qualities of the eu as a funder on the first dimension the large scale of eu funding for undp sets it apart from most member states though eu funding priorities display elements of specialisation as well as similar emphases to member states on the second dimension undp s large scope of work its implementation capacities and accountability standards are attractive to the eu but additional criteria including organisational cost effectiveness can alter the perception of added value finally the scale of eu funding and the possibility to engage in difficult country contexts are key elements of the added value of the eu as a funder however the eu s non core funding emphasis presents a challenge for the un resource mobilisation agenda calling for greater flexibility in organisational funding attention to these multiple dimensions of added value can inform future eu choices on how to orient engagement with undp to reinforce strengths of the organisation and enable adaptations envisaged in un reform processes this book examines experiences of romani political participation in eastern and western europe providing an understanding of the emerging political space that over 8 million romani citizens occupy within the eu and addressing issues related to the socio political circumstances of romani communities within european countries the central aim of this book is to define the approach of eu development policy regarding africa since the end of the cold war it focuses on the impact of eu development policy on the domain of international development and the objective of the eu to become a prominent international actor the book relies on martha finnemore s social constructivist research it concentrates on the dynamics maintained by the eu with the normative basis that characterises the structure and agents of international development and assesses how it affected eu behaviour as expressed through its development policy concerning africa by doing so it exposes both the marked effect of eu development policy in the domain of international development and the form of paradise model of development the eu promoted in africa therein the volume largely confirms the identified agents as the source of the norms that define the structure of international development and the eu as its derivative it argues that eu development policy is currently a general projection of the normative structure of international development specifically regarding the policy orientation of its identified agents as a result the book contends that the eu fell short of its efforts to export its form of paradise to africa since the end of the cold war as a corollary of its limitations to stand as a distinct and leading actor in the domain of international development this book examines the ways in which the european union and its policy of conditionality has shaped the post conflict reconstruction of the western balkans this book was published as a special issue of europe asia studies the protection of minorities in bulgaria presents a paradox although minority protection played a prominent role in the accession of the country to the european union hardly any positive minority rights were adopted in post communist bulgaria apart from the reversal of communist assimilation campaigns only limited progress has been made in the area of minority protection positive minority rights have remained very restricted some minorities notably pomaks and macedonians have been denied recognition and the formal adoption of legislation or policy documents has often not been followed by implementation by charting minority rights policies in bulgaria in the period between 1989 and 2004 this study clarifies the main reasons for the limited progress in the post communist period while in contrast to some other countries in central and eastern europe minority kin states did not play a major role in post communist bulgaria the european union and the council of europe were instrumental in putting minority questions on the agenda of bulgarian governments however their impact was smaller than much of the literature on enlargement and conditionality would suggest domestic factors were crucial in shaping minority rights policies in post communist bulgaria of particular importance was the communist legacy which acted as a brake on the development of minority rights
