digital humanities workshops is the first volume to focus explicitly on the most common and accessible kind of training in digital humanities. Drawing together the experiences and expertise of dozens of scholars and practitioners from a variety of disciplines and geographical contexts, the chapters in this collection examine the development, deployment, and assessment of a workshop or workshop series in the first section, where the authors seek to situate digital humanities workshops within local, regional, and national contexts. The second section guides readers through questions of audience in relation to digital humanities workshops. In the third and final section, how authors explore the mechanics of such workshops. Taken together, the chapters in this volume answer the important question: why are digital humanities workshops so important, and what is their present and future role? Digital humanities workshops examines a range of digital humanities workshops and highlights audiences, resources, and impact. This volume will appeal to academics, researchers, and postgraduate students as well as professionals working in the digital humanities field.

This professional book introduces an analytical framework of urban informality perspectives in the Middle East that is aligned with the Global South. The context of Egypt, Lebanon, and Jordan in the Middle East is the transregional focus of this book. In these contexts, the book opens a new arena of academic discussion on the theory and practice of urban informality, urban informality experiences, and urban sustainability transitions in Middle East cities. Questions of urban informality as a site of transitions, interrelated and interlinked with urban sustainability transitions, in speedy changes in a given environment. The book presents urban informality sustainability transitions regarding resilience and adaptability that require shifts in urban systems, shifts from a static process to a dynamic process that eradicates the fragmentation between the tensions, anxieties, and pressures of four modes of production, reproduction, consumption, and distribution of goods and services in the city and its practices. Finally, through eleven chapters, the concluding remarks explore to what extent and how can urban informality transitions be sustainable.

21 papers present a holistic perspective on the research and public value of the site of Jericho, an iconic site with a long and impressive history stretching from the Epipalaeolithic to the present day, covering all aspects of archaeological work from past to present and beyond. They re-evaluate and assess the legacy of this important site.
