

Youth Participation in Electoral Processes

eLearning Course

The EC-UNDP Joint Task Force on Electoral Assistance has developed a free, self-paced eLearning course on Youth Participation in Electoral Processes. This interactive eLearning consists of six modules and a final exam. Participants receive a certificate after completing the final exam at the end of the course.

- After completing the course, the participants will have a better understanding of the hurdles that the youth are facing worldwide, preventing them from actively participating in the political processes.
- Through concrete case studies and country-based examples, this course looks at strategies and provides entry points for Electoral Management Bodies (EMBs) to promote youth participation in elections, be it as voters, candidates or election administrators, in all phases of the electoral cycle.
- The participants will learn about the current youth-related legislative and policy frameworks, specific tools to empower youth, such as social media, as well as ways to promote youth participation in electoral processes.

The eLearning complements UNDP's publication "Youth Participation in Electoral Processes - a Handbook for Electoral Management Bodies (EMBs)". The publication is available here.

WHO IS IT FOR ?

The eLearning and its accompanying handbook is, first and foremost, designed for Electoral Management Bodies (EMBs). However, other stakeholders, such as members of civil society organizations, media, political parties and candidates, will also find it useful.

WHAT'S IN THERE ?

The eLearning course has been designed to build cognitive skills and includes animated youth journeys, illustrations, infographics, country examples, short exercises and module summaries. This eLearning is a repository of knowledge products, best practices and other key documents that can be of interest to a wide range of practitioners.

HOW AND WHY DO I ENROLL ?

This eLearning course is free of charge and is available on the EC-UNDP JTF eLearning page. The course enables the participant to progress and complete the course at their own pace.
